CLUB NEWS, Whats going on, by Michael Pinto

To start off on the national scene, Westchester is planning to make 52 more episodes of Star Blazers!!! The next 52 episodes will be based on Yamato: The New Voyage and Yamato III. A release date is unknown as of yet. Going from national to local news, Star Blazers is back on in Philadelphia! It is on WTAF-TV, (channel 29). Fans are advised to check listings. As for the campaign in New York, things are looking up. Supports are planning to try to get it on WPIX-TV, (channel 11). In Minneapolis fans are starting a campaign to get the show on in the Twin Cities area. People interested should write-Brian Pohl, [REDACTED]. Fans are also urged to write KMSP, [REDACTED].

Also the club will have its own pen-pal list. All people that want to have their name on it should send an index card with their name, address and a short lin about their interests. Nicknames are also exceptable. Also the club is planning a contest. Look for deatails in the next issue.

BE FOREVER YAMATO, by Laurie Knox

After Yamato: The New Voyage, the next adventure in the Yamato saga is Be Forever Yamato, a four hour movie. This movie involves a part of the Dark Star Empire as an enemy. The story begins in the year 2202, with Earth rebuilt after the Comet Empire attack. There is a sudden disruption of peace as a strange ship appears, land on Earth and takes control of Earth. During the attack, the Yamato and its crew manages to take off, although Nova is left behind in an accident which leaves her injured. At Earth Defence Headquarters, Alex Wildstar dies to save the Commander. Meanwhile the Yamato fights through various enemy attacks and sets course for the enemy's home planet.

Various charactors are introduced, including Mio Sandor, Sandor's daughter. But upon speaking with Mio, Derek Wildstar finds that she is Sasha, Alex's now older daughter, (it is said that Iskandarians age quickly). Back on Earth, the injured Nova is taken to the room of one of the enemy men, Arifon. Meanwhile the Yamato reaches the enemy planet, (after alot of fighting), which seems to be an exact replica of Earth. As the crew is introduced to the blue colored inhabitants of theis planet, they realize upon close inspection that this planet is an opposit of Earth; At this point the enemy's plan of sneak attack on the Yamato in unvailed, and the crew prepares for battle. Sasha refuses to leave the planet, despite Wildstars coaxing. The Yamato then takes off in a wave of fighting, and destroys the artificial outer shell of the planet, (with Sasha's help from within), revealing a mechanized world. Back on Earth, a last effort has been made to gain back control; a large attack succeeds and the enemy is defeated. At the enemy planet, Sasha is killed by the planets leaders, and after the Yamato destroys the world with its powerful wave-motion gun. After this Sasha and Starsha meet in sprit form. The Yamato heads home, again victorious.

Did you know that in Florida, in the Del Ray/Boca Raton area that there is a "Yamato" Road off of I-95!

To Starblazers or to Star Blazer?, by Michael Pinto

To Starblazer or to Star Blazer? That is the question. And some people ask the same question. They will turn on their TV sets to see in bold letters, the word Star Blazers, only to hear the announcer proclaim the show in one slur, "Starblazers". The funny thing is that on the show, it is rare to hear the characters use the name. In fact the only time is when Nova calls the crew, "those wonderful Star Blazers." However you may note that at the top of News-Line, it reads Starblazers. You can also note it is spelled the same way on the membership card. The reason is that it is shorter, faster and cheaper to print that way. It also comes in handy when taking out ads. However most people talk about that show, Starblazers. However it should be know for trivialities sake that the name of the show as set down by Westchester is Star Blazers. It should also be noted that the Japanese name is Uchu Senkan Yamato. Also when it was realested in England as a movie it was just called Space Cruiser. Either way you spell it it is still the same fantastic show.
